What would you do? That's what we want to know. Here is our dilemma of the week: @mayor emanuel took Twitter by storm by spoofing the real Rahm Emanuel. Sanctions

Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi on Sunday dismissed new U.N. sanctions against him and said a small group of rebels protesting his rule were surrounded and would be defeated. In a telephone interview with Serbia's Pink TV station, he said Saturday's U.N. Security Council vote imposing travel and asset sanctions on him and close aides was null and void.

Switch

Gadhafi seemed increasingly cornered Sunday as security forces defected to the opposition in a town a short drive from the capital. Former security forces said they had switched sides and joined the opposition in Zawiya, a town about 35 miles from the capital, Tripoli. Some buildings in Zawiya showed signs of damage, including a freshly burnt-out police station.

Surge

Thousands of Egyptian laborers escaping the turmoil in Libya streamed across the border into Tunisia on Sunday, straining the country's capacity to cope with the sudden refugee crisis. More than 50,000 have fled over the frontier the past six days, and there was no sign of an end to the exodus of mostly poor working men looking for a way home.

Transition?

Libya's ex-Justice Minister, Moustafa Abdel Jalil, told Al Arabiya TV on Sunday that he foresees a transitional national council taking place and that he isn't forming an interim government. FROM

Bloomberg

EN ROUTE TO GENEVA Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi must go "as soon as possible," Secretary of State Hillary Clinton said after the U.N. Security Council voted unanimously to freeze his assets.

"We want him to leave, we want him to end his regime," and to call off the mercenaries who are targeting Libyan citizens, Clinton told reporters traveling with her to Geneva to discuss the turmoil with her counterparts.

The Security Council late Saturday voted 15-0 to freeze the foreign assets of Gadhafi and four aides and to bar them from traveling, in the broadest international effort to halt the violence in Libya that has left more than 1,000 people dead.

Middle East stock shares fell, sending Saudi Arabia's index to a nine-month low, on concern the deadly clashes of the past week that caused oil prices to surge to a more than two-year high will stall a global recovery.

The unrest that has swept the Middle East in the past month, ousting President Zine El Abidine Ben Ali from Tunisia and Hosni Mubarak as Egyptian president, on Sunday spread to Oman, where protesters clashed with security forces in the province of Sohar.

In Tunisia, the country's interim Prime Minister Mohamed Ghannouchi resigned Sunday after three people were killed in street protests.

Unrest in Libya and Persian Gulf countries including Bahrain has prompted concern that supplies of oil from the world's main region of crude production may be disrupted.

Crude oil for April delivery climbed 60 cents, or 0.6 percent, to settle at $97.88 a barrel on the

New York Mercantile Exchange on Friday, the most recent day of trading. U.S. oil rose to $103.41 on Feb. 24, the highest intraday price since Sept. 29, 2008.

Clinton also praised the actions of King Abdullah of Saudi Arabia, the world's biggest oil producer, and Bahrain's King Hamad Bin Isa al Khalifa, saying they are engaged in "meaningful outreach" to their citizens.

The Bahraini king has reduced government housing loans by 25 percent. The Saudi king has taken measures designed to improve employment in the kingdom and, along with other OPEC nations, pledged to replace any lost Libyan oil.

Libya and Saudi Arabia are among the 12 members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, which pumps about 40 percent of the world's oil.

Their triumph is our shame

Democracy is on the march in the Middle East as the uprisings that began in Tunisia and Egypt and soon spread everywhere from Bahrain to Iran continue. While much remains uncertain about what will emerge from these unlikely warp-speed revolutions, one thing is for sure: We Americans should feel like lazy, apathetic garbage.

We should feel like a flesh-folded fat man watching his ripped younger brother train for a triathlon.

One has to assume that the success or failure of the uprisings in many of these countries depends entirely on how many ordinary people are ready to die in order to gain their self-determination. French officials estimate that 2,000 people have died as Moammar "They're Putting Hallucinogens in the People's Coffee" Gadhafi tries to quell Libya's rebellion. Meanwhile, here in the country that claims to be "The Godfather Part II" of democracy, the majority of us simply cannot be bothered to brush the Cheetos dust from our fingers and head to our local polling place once a year.

And twice a year? Yeah, right! Even with the heightened attention of Rahmania, Chicago's mayoral and aldermanic elections saw less than a 45 percent turnout among registered voters (so not even counting those Chicagoans who are not registered at all). Rahm's vote total could be the lowest ever for a winning Chicago mayoral candidate.

In the most recent midterm elections—widely seen as a kind of conservative neo-revolution—42 percent of registered voters showed up, according to The Associated Press, a total of just 90 million people. 2008 marked the most impressive voting turnout in modern American history, and the AP reported only about 62 percent of the eligible voting population cast a ballot for those contests.

This is the paradox of democracy: Once you have it, once you don't have to risk your life to protect it, it becomes far more entertaining to vote for the best C-list celebrity trying to dance his or her way back to fame than your congressional representative. Watching people take to the streets in the Middle East should frustrate us to no end because the largest political party in the U.S. is not Democrat or Republican or Independent but Who Cares They're All the Same.

But this is what the party of Who Cares They're All the Same doesn't get: By not voting, they are in fact voting. And they're voting for the interests that care the most. They're voting for enormous financial institutions and pharmaceutical lobbies and agribusiness and big oil and health insurance companies.

One of the greatest problems with democracies—and I sincerely wish that the people of the Middle East get to discover this soon—is that in the face of apathy, they can become captured by well-organized interests, especially those interested in turning a profit.

We wipe the Cheetos dust from our fingers to exercise the right to vote and often forget that some are still wiping away blood to exercise theirs.

Cops: Stabbing suspects worked with drug cartels

Chicago Tribune

Three men suspected in the fatal stabbing of two men in an Edgewater apartment were part of a crew that did business with drug cartels—and may be responsible for several drug-related mass killings—police disclosed Sunday.

The double homicide Saturday prompted a pursuit that left one Chicago officer wounded and a suspect in the slayings dead from police gunfire.

The crew's suspected ringleader, Arturo Ibarra, 37, was shot and killed by police during a vehicle pursuit just after the two stabbing victims were discovered inside a fourth-floor apartment in the 5800 block of North Winthrop Avenue, police said. The crew's two other members were taken into custody, awaiting criminal charges.

OFFICER DETAILS

The police officer who was shot is 39, has 12 years on the force, and is currently assigned to the Gang Investigations Unit, police said. He was taken to St. Francis Hospital of Evanston in good condition.

The two victims were found with their throats slit and a third man was found in the apartment critically injured. Police believe the victims and the assailants were conducting drug-related business when the slayings occurred.

"This is a crew of individuals we've been looking at for some time," Nick Roti, chief of Chicago police's organized crime division, told reporters Sunday.

Police also are investigating whether the group was involved in several drug-related mass killings, including situations involving four men found dead inside a garage in West Lawn in September and three men found bound and gagged inside a car in McKinley Park in April, a different law enforcement source said.

The trio worked for a roofing company, but it's believed they also sold drugs, and even robbed and killed some of their customers, the source said.

The slayings were related to a drug operation that extends to Mexico.

Roti did say the police department "suspected" the three men were involved in other homicides across the city.

What's next for Chicago's police chief?

Chicago Tribune

Two days before his contract was set to expire, Chicago police Supt. Jody Weis remained noncommittal Sunday about his future as the city's top cop.

He said he has not spoken with Mayor-elect Rahm Emanuel, who pledged during the campaign to replace Weis.

"We'll see what happens," Weis said during a news conference at police headquarters that announced the selection of a city officer to serve as part of a federal intelligence-gathering effort along the U.S.-Mexico border.

Weis said he would like to remain in Chicago after his three-year, $310,000-a-year position as police superintendent ends. His contract is set to expire Tuesday.

"When this position ends, I'll look into doing something else. I'd like to do something here in Chicago," he said.

Hired by Mayor Daley in 2008 following several high-profile police scandals in the department, Weis remained in the political hot seat as he battled perceptions of high crime, complaints about manpower and a seemingly unshakable image as an outsider. Weis came to the department after years with the FBI, becoming the first outsider to run the department in nearly 50 years.

"As for me, let's wait and see what happens next," he said.

Friends, family mourn Duerson

Pallbearers carry the casket after Sunday's funeral for former Chicago Bears star Dave Duerson. BRIAN CASSELLA/TRIBUNE

Chicago Tribune

Former teammates and friends solemnly gathered Saturday to attend the funeral of former Chicago Bears safety Dave Duerson at Antioch Missionary Baptist Church on the South Side.

Hundreds of mourners filled the main floor and balcony of the church for the closed-casket ceremony, swaying to gospel songs of mourning and praise. His family was at the front of the church, weeping as the ceremony proceeded.

For two occasionally raucous hours, family, friends and teammates from the Bears celebrated the shortened life of Dave Duerson.

Teammate Otis Wilson, his voice initially weak and halting, thanked God for his friendship with Duerson. He told Duerson's family in the front pews they could turn to the Bears for support, including those from the 1985 Super Bowl team, who were gathered in the audience.

"Dave might not be here. But you've got a lot of brothers over there," he said, pointing to a group of players.

Duerson's son, Brock, talked of plans to start a foundation to aid athletes dealing with brain injuries and mental illness.

"Under unusual circumstances, my dad decided to donate his brain, and I'm proud," he said.

Rev. Jesse Jackson praised Duerson as a "winner" who had the presence of mind to preserve his brain for scientific study that could protect future generations of players.

"He mastered the Super Bowl of life," Jackson said.

Diplomat announces run

1 Veteran Egyptian diplomat Amr Moussa (above) said Sunday he intends to run for president, a post held for three decades by Hosni Mubarak until he was toppled from power by a mass uprising this month.

Senator gets immunity

2 Police say they did not detain Arizona state Sen. Scott Bundgaard, who was involved in a domestic violence incident over the weekend, because state law gives him immunity from arrest while the legislature is in session.

100-day ultimatum

3 Iraqi Prime Minister Nuri al-Maliki gave his ministers on Sunday a 100-day ultimatum to step up reforms or face firing after nationwide protests against corruption and poor basic services.

Transition in Ireland

4 A picture was emerging Sunday of a dramatic transformation of Irish politics in the country's first election since a multibillion-dollar economic bailout. Fianna Fail—the party that has ruled for 60 of the past 80 years—appeared headed for its worst election ever.

Pilot's body recovered

Elizabeth Taylor watches Oscars

6 Two-time Oscar winner Elizabeth Taylor was cheering for "The King's Speech" to win the Academy Award for best film Sunday, her 79th birthday, from a hospital where she remains in treatment for heart problems.

Activists turn protest into Capitol building sleepover

7 MADISON, Wis. Union workers and activists who refused to leave the Wisconsin Capitol building Sunday, against orders, would be allowed to spend the night, police said.

Authorities had set a deadline earlier in the day of 4 p.m. for demonstrators to leave the building, saying it needed to be cleaned after roughly two weeks of protests.

While many people left, hundreds of others defied the order and remained inside. Some say they are willing to risk arrest in a conflict that has become a flash point in the nation's debate around labor unions

"We have the right to be here. This is the people's house. This is a house of labor. This is a house that Wisconsin built," Mahlon Mitchell, president of the Professional Fire Fighters of Wisconsin, said from inside the Capitol.

Protesters are upset with Wisconsin Gov. Scott Walker's call to curb collective bargaining rights.

The embattled first-term Republican has shown no sign of backing down and defended his proposal Sunday on NBC's

"Meet the Press."

Wisconsin is "broke," and unions use their power to block necessary cost-saving measures, Walker argued.

"It's about time somebody stood up and told the truth in this state, and said, 'Here's our problem, here's the solution,' and acted on it," he said. "Because if we don't, we fail to make a commitment to the future."

The Wisconsin Assembly has passed a Republican bill that would strip most state workers of the bulk of their collective-bargaining rights. The bill must now clear the Wisconsin Senate.

Racy painting misses the point

9 MOSCOW A painting of a large penis on a bridge in Russia's second city, St. Petersburg, has been dropped from the shortlist for an art prize, organizers said.

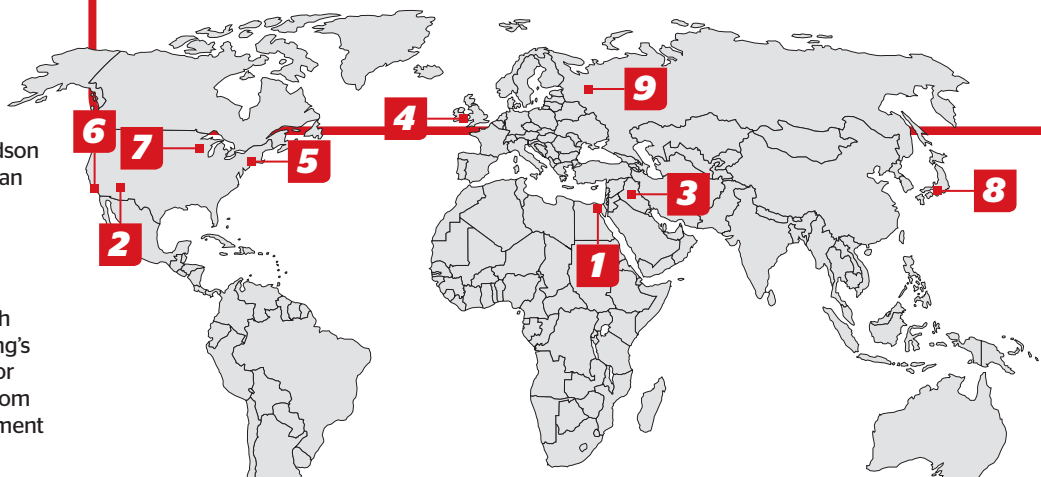

The painting, which pointed skyward when the bridge was raised, was painted last June by Russian art group Voina, or War, to protest tight security in the city prior to an international meeting.

The picture, which was washed off by firefighters, faced the St. Petersburg headquarters of Russia's Federal Security Service, successor of the Soviet-era KGB.

Organizers of the prize for innovation awarded by Russia's State Centre of Contemporary Arts and supported by the Culture Ministry had included the picture, which Voina had called "A Penis in KGB Captivity."

But after failing to get approval to include the picture from Voina, the organizers removed it from the shortlist, they said.

Voina condemned the withdrawal of the painting from the competition.

HOT DATE

Friday

Playing for time to overcome a deep partisan impasse over the U.S. budget, senior lawmakers backed away Sunday from a possible government shutdown. Washington will run out of money Friday and non-essential services will halt unless action is taken. A short-term fix to buy time seemed increasingly likely.

OAKLAND 15, CUBS 7

PLAY BALL

WHAT DID WE LEARN FROM THE CUBS' FIRST SPRING GAME?

By Brian Moore

REDEYE

Spring training is like one prolonged baseball experiment or audition as teams try to find their identity or their next big thing.

For the Cubs, it all began Sunday in their Cactus League opener vs. Oakland. With the Cubs sporting new players such as pitcher Matt Garza and first baseman Carlos Pena, a manager going through his first full season with the team and a lot of questions marks after a disappointing 2010, fans will be watching this team closely for any signs of what is to come.

After one game, the optimists and pessimists have a lot to chew on. So, here are some of the knee-jerk reactions you might hear after a 15-7 loss to Oakland.

CARLOS ZAMBANO'S NO HITTER!

OK, so it was only two innings, but Cubs fans will take it. After winning eight of his past 10 starts of 2010, there's reason to be hopeful. Plus, he didn't have a "Carlos moment." Woo-hoo!

THE NEW DERREK LEE?

The Cubs signed Carlos Pena for $10 million to fill the void left by the trade of longtime first baseman Derrek Lee last season. And that $10 million got them zero hits and two men left on base.

SORIANO'S BACK

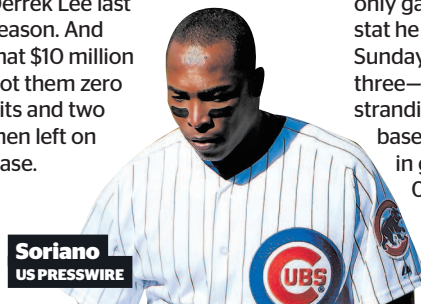

Much-ridiculed Cubs outfielder Alfonso Soriano is batting 1,000! Soriano went 3-for-3 and had two RBIs. Take that, haters.

TYLER MANIA IS OVER

Tyler Colvin filled Cubs fans with hope last season with his 20 homers and 56 RBIs in 394 plate appearances. The only gaudy stat he put up Sunday was three—as in stranding three base-runners in going 0-for3.

WELCOME, MATT

New starting pitcher Matt Garza certainly made a big first impression: He gave up five hits in two innings of work, including a grand slam to Coco Crisp in the third that allowed the A's to tie it up. That is so Cubs.

GUILLÉN TINKERS WITH LINEUP

White Sox Manager Ozzie Guillen already switched his lineup for Monday's exhibition opener against the Dodgers, moving Adam Dunn to the third spot in an effort to get his designated hitter more at-bats this spring. "I want to protect Adam and [Paul Konerko] with [Alex] Rios, and I can do a lot of things here," said Guillen, who originally had Rios batting third, followed by Dunn and Konerko. TRIBUNE

1 The Oscars are the Super Bowl for entertainment. How are they like the real Super Bowl?

The Oscars have "Black Swan" and the Super Bowl had Lynn Swann, who, um ... wore black.

By the end of the night, I may or may not owe a bookie a certain amount of cash I certainly don't have.

They won't have Lady Gaga showing up in a giant egg, either. I hope.

Win or lose, everybody goes home to sleep on their piles of money.

Kristin Cavallari had no reason to be at the Super Bowl or the Oscars.

2 Hand out an Academy Award to someone in Chicago sports.

Best picture goes to the Internet for Patrick Kane's "Wasted."

The award for best supporting actor in a power forward role: Car-looos BOOOOOOOOZER.

Best actor goes to Luol Deng for acting like he's worth the money the Bulls are paying him.

Best performance by a male in a leading role to Derrick Rose. Duh.

Best director with a lousy starting two guard: Tom Thibodeau.

3 Brent Seabrook's contract extension. Rank it on your excitement meter.

Just above "stubbing my toe" and just below "passing out on the train and waking up in Evanston."

On a scale of 1 to 10, I rank it at "pi." Math nerds in the hiz-zouse!

Ask me again April 10, when they're in or they're out.

Excitement meter? Extension? What is this, a male enhancement commercial?

4 Why is Ozzie Guillen still talking about Bobby Jenks?

Don't know, but talk about chewing the fat.

His face has yet to be replaced in this space. Also, his beard was AMAZING!

Jenks left town without returning any of Ozzie's "Twilight" books.

He's a big boy—lots to talk about.

Ozzie holding grudges? Stop the presses.

5 Spring training games have begun. What should Chicago fans look for?

Shelter.

If you're my buds MK, 'Stina or Gracie, me drinking beer on your porch.

Cubs outfielder Alfonso Soriano will attempt to "pull a Luol Deng" but just pull a hamstring.

Flights to Arizona.

They should be looking at the Bulls. Wake us up when spring training is over.

Brent Seabrook watches a first-period goal against the Phoenix Coyotes on Sunday at the United Center. Seabrook agreed to a five-year contract extension Sunday. NUCCIO DINUZZO/TRIBUNE

Hawks can't quit him

The Blackhawks and defenseman Brent Seabrook officially agreed to a five-year contract extension Sunday.

"Brent is a very important member of our organization and we are looking forward to him being part of a core group that will be a contender for many years to come," General Manager Stan Bowman said in a statement. "We have been fortunate to have Brent as part of our family since he was a teenager and we are proud to be able to announce this news today."

No money terms were announced, but the deal is believed to be worth $29 million over the five years with a salary-cap hit of $5.8 million per season.

"The Blackhawks are the only organization I've ever played for, and I've been a part of something very special in Chicago over the last six seasons," Seabrook said. "I'm excited to continue being a part of this group, playing in the United Center and making our fans proud."

Seabrook currently ranks third on the Hawks with a career-high 29 assists, and shares fifth with a career-best 33 points, both tops among club blueliners.

BLACKHAWKS 4, PHOENIX 3 (SO)

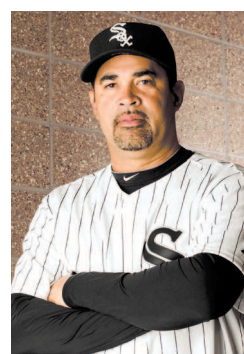

Jonathan Toews scored the game-winner in the shootout to give the Blackhawks a 4-3 victory over the Phoenix Coyotes on Sunday night at the United Center.

The victory was key for the Hawks as they battle for a Western Conference postseason berth. The defending Stanley Cup champions entered four points behind the Coyotes with 20 games left in the regular season.

In regulation, Jonathan Toews had two goals for the Hawks while Marian Hossa also scored and Patrick Kane had two assists. Corey Crawford earned the win in goal for the Hawks while Ilya Bryzgalov suffered the loss for the Coyotes.

Bears offensive genius Mike Martz wouldn't commit to quarterback Caleb Hanie as Jay Cutler's backup. This is the man that'll be calling the plays for your Bears, Chicago. Enjoy.

GET OVER IT

Ozzie Guillen was ranting about former White Sox pitcher Bobby Jenks over the weekend. I know you think it's noble to defend your team and family, Ozzie, but you just sound like a jilted lover. Wait, are you a jilted lover?

NO COMMENT

Cubs pitcher Matt Garza gave up a grand slam in his debut. Definitely the right guy for this team.

THE GREAT
metromix@
tribune.com

By The Great Burgerelli

If there is one promotion that I, The Great Burgerelli, confront with skepticism, it is the burger deal. Typically employed by taverns to lure in customers on evenings of slow business, these burger deals rarely result in a patty of passable quality. Not to mention that a great many burger deals are ridden with hidden upcharges, a proverbial glove-slap to the face if you ask me. (I am talking to you, Jimmy Green's, with your "$4.95 build-your-own-burger" with extra charges for cheese, bacon and anything else you "build" on.)

Though I owe my day job to a sizable inheritance earmarked only for burger consumption (that's a story for another time), The Great Burgerelli does realize that not everyone is made of money. If your bank account simply will not allow for another $13 Mastodon burger at dear Kuma's Corner, I can confidently recommend the $5-or-less deals at these five fine burger-flipping establishments.

Burgerelli's high 5

LENNY GILMORE/REDEYE

Old Oak Tap

2109 W. Chicago Ave. 773-772-0406

The deal: $5 Old Oak Burger on Mondays

The burger: Identical to the house burger usually served for $10 at this West Town bar, it's topped with Vermont cheddar, lettuce, onion, tomato, sweet onion jam and a special sauce. Includes fries (spicy or regular), salad, or mashed potatoes.

The fine print: None that we're aware of.

Poag Mahone's

333 S. Wells St. 312-566-9100

The deal: $3.50 burgers on Mondays

The burger: To be truthful, this Financial District pub does charge 75 cents to top your burger with cheese, but $4.25 is still a bargain price for this exceptionally juicy, nicely charred patty of grass-fed beef. Lettuce, tomato, pickle and coleslaw are included; fries are not.

The fine print: A $2 minimum must be spent, but surely you need something to drink. May I suggest a pint of Two Brothers Northwind imperial stout ($6)?

Villains Bar & Grill

649 S. Clark St. 312-356-9992

The deal: Half-price burgers on Mondays

The burger: To stay at the $5 mark, choose any of this South Loop tavern's burgers with a regular price of $10 or less. All are made with Dietzler Farms beef and come with fries, tots or a side salad. We suggest the Loot with Swiss cheese, roasted portobello mushroom and red peppers or the Score with smoked bacon and cheddar.

The fine print: One drink purchase required. Lucky for you, a plethora of delicious draft beers are also on special for $4 on Mondays.

Patsy's Place

2825 N. Lincoln Ave. 773-248-2825

The deal: $2.50 burgers on Tuesdays

The burger: For such a small price, we'd expect a small burger. But this solid half-pound patty is cooked perfectly to order and arrives with a pile of golden, crispy fries. Red onion, lettuce and tomato are included; your choice of cheese does bump the price to a still-respectable $3.25.

The fine print: $3.50 drink purchase required.

Rocks

1301 W. Schubert Ave. 773-472-7738

The deal: $5 burgers on Wednesdays

The burger: Choose any burger on the menu—including the featured burger of the month—at this Lincoln Park bar. I have always had a special place in my heart for the BBBest Burger with crumbled blue cheese, buffalo sauce, bacon (hence the three B's) plus sauteed spinach. All come on a pretzel bun with your choice of an impressive variety of sides, from green beans to mac and cheese to curly fries.

The fine print: None, though let it be known that this deal is not offered at Rocks' sibling bar in Lakeview.

THE BETTY WHITE AWARD

Kirk Douglas stretched his presenter moment practically as long as his career with some Betty White-style randiness. First he flirted with Hathaway, saying, "Gorgeous! Where were you when I was making pictures?" That was at about 7:51 p.m. Then the 94-year-old kept the supporting actress nominees waiting for about 5 minutes by repeatedly saying, "You know ..." Finally, he announced Melissa Leo the winner and when she came on stage he flirted with her. Silver fox!

"I'm not going to drop the f-bomb like [Melissa Leo] did; I've done that before."

—Supporting actor winner Christian Bale

NICE TRY

Producers try to sex up the Oscars—with mixed results

Oscar producers, the more you try to make your annual Hollywood lovefest appeal to young viewers, the older you seem. And you are 83!

"Anne, I must say, you look so beautiful and so hip," James Franco, 32, deadpanned as he and co-host Anne Hathaway, 28, walked on stage to open Sunday's ceremony on ABC.

It was the first of several mentions of how "hip," "cool" or "young" the ceremony was—or wasn't. Early in the show, presenter Justin Timberlake pretended to use a smart-phone app to illuminate a "Shrek" backdrop on stage. The Internet also was mentioned in some presenter openings. A pre-taped segment that featured characters from "The Social Network," "The Twilight Saga: Eclipse" and "Harry Potter and the Deathly Hallows: Part 1" delivering lines through auto-tune was a complete bomb.

Oscar voters, too, seemed to overlook many of the younger-skewing films, handing the British royalty film "The King's Speech" awards for best actor, best director and best picture. It beat out the Facebook film "The Social Network," the trippy "Inception," the boxing film "The Fighter" and six other nominees.

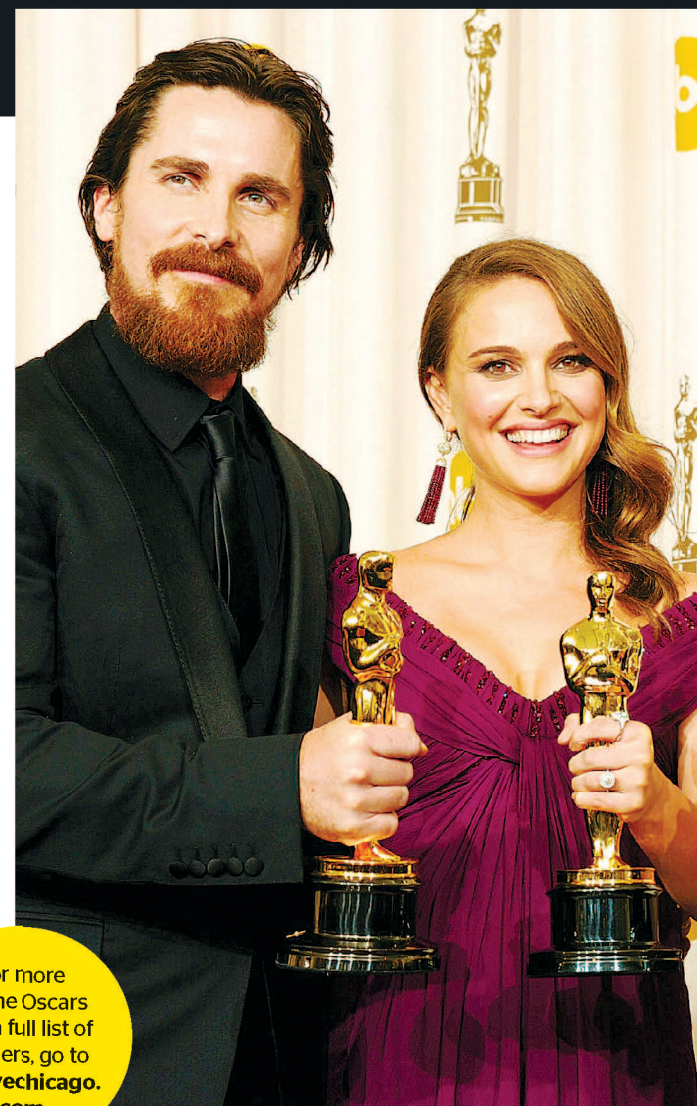

"I have a feeling my career's just peaked," Colin Firth, best actor for playing King George VI, quipped, getting big laughs.

CURT WAGNER
cwwagner@tribune.com

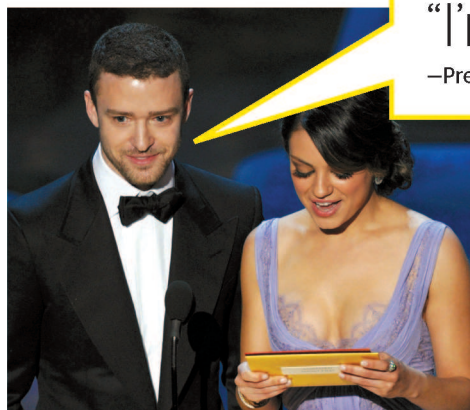

For more on the Oscars and a full list of winners, go to redeyechicago.com

Academy voters did manage to crown popular younger stars Natalie Portman best actress for "Black Swan" and Christian Bale best supporting actor for "The Fighter."

Hathaway and Franco, the youngest hosting pair in Academy Awards history, tried mightily to liven up the proceedings, but more often than not fell flat in their delivery of the jokes written for them. Props to Hathaway, who was working her butt off, even with iffy results. Franco's mellow vibe just didn't suit the hosting gig. They shined best when reacting to what was happening around them.

"I thought 'F' stood for 'The Fighter,'" Hathaway said after

"I'm Banksy."

—Presenter Justin Timberlake

"That's gross."

—Presenter Cate Blanchett, after seeing the makeup effects for eventual winner "The Wolfman"

COLD OPEN

Franco and Hathaway killed in the pre-taped video tribute to the 10 best picture nominees. They entered the dream of former host Alec Baldwin much like the characters did in "Inception," then appeared in scenes from the other films, including "The King's Speech." "I have good news from the future, microphones get smaller," Hathaway said into the film's giant microphone as she winked at King George VI (Colin Firth). Sadly, it was their funniest scripted moment of the entire night.

THIS IS HOW IT'S DONE

Oscar producers hired eight-time host Billy Crystal—one of the best hosts ever—to introduce a segment showing 18-time host Bob Hope in his heyday. Crystal nailed it, and the Hope clips had the crowd laughing. Talk about rubbing it in the faces of Hathaway and Franco.

TOP FOUR

The program also ground to a halt with homages to past Oscar-winning films that preceded each award presentation, stretching the ceremony out over its allotted time by about 12 minutes. Wouldn't it be better just to get on with the business of the night? Presenters offer a little banter, then list the nominees and give the award.

A brisk show would attract that coveted young crowd.

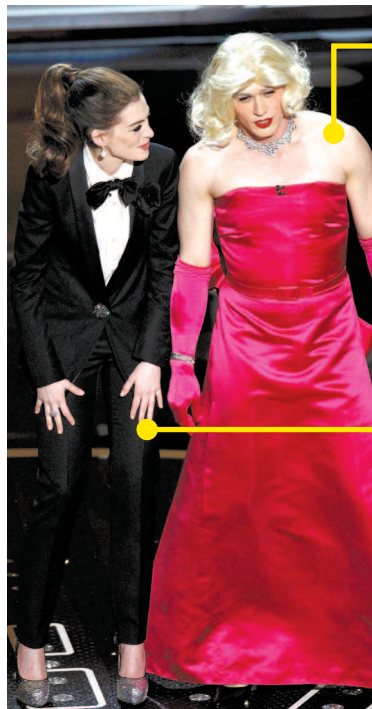

BEST PRESENTERS

Robert Downey Jr. and Jude Law showed their "Sherlock Holmes" chemistry live as Law berated Downey for taking the spotlight from the nominees for best visual effects:

Law: "It's their moment. If it wasn't for them, your closest association with a superhero would've been in 2001, when you got busted in a cheap hotel with a woman dressed as Batgirl."

Downey: "OK, first of all, that cheap hotel room cost $1,250 a night with a corporate discount. Second, it was 2000, not 2001, and most importantly, she was dressed as Wonder Woman, and THAT attention to detail is what has won the respect of all the Academy voters for these fine men and women."

BEST DRAG MOMENT

Yes, we all thought this would go to best supporting actress nominee Helena Bonham Carter, but co-host Franco topped her when he came on stage dressed like Marilyn Monroe. "The weird part is I just got a text message from Charlie Sheen," he said. Zing!

BEST PERFORMANCE BY A NON-SINGER

Hathaway totally stole my Hugh Jackman schtick—I call him Huge Jackman—when she sang a revised version of "On My Own" as pay-back to the Australian, who when he hosted the Oscars in 2009 pulled her from the crowd to sing a duet with her. On Sunday, she sang her revenge, "On my own, 'cause someone's a huge jackass ..."

CELINE DION

Celine Dion sang "Smile" to accompany the in memoriam segment. Oscar presenters seemed to be telling bored viewers, "Smile, you could be dead." OH YES I DID!

"You are the No. 1 reason children get picked up late from school—because their mothers are watching 'General Hospital.'"

—Presenter Sandra Bullock, speaking to best actor nominee James Franco

INSPIRATION ON THE RED CARPET

By Dana Moran | REDEYE

They came. They pranced. They glittered. The stars inspired a lot of awe—and plenty of horror—on the red carpet at the Academy Awards on Sunday night. But what inspired their looks? RedEye made a few (un)educated guesses.

BEST AND WORST ...

Jennifer Lawrence

Inspired by Jessica Rabbit from "Who Framed Roger Rabbit?"

Jennifer may not have won best actress, but she took our top prize on the red carpet by showing up in this simple, sultry gown that had everyone's eyes bugging out. GETTY IMAGES PHOTO

Cate Blanchett

Inspired by Lady Gaga
Since Gaga herself had no real reason to attend the Oscars, Cate had to step in. Her odd, bubble-beaded gown might have worked without the weird circular chest panel. REUTERS PHOTO

Hailee Steinfeld

Inspired by "Black Swan"

We knew someone would show up in a ballet-themed outfit, and Hailee's sweet, full-skirted gown was perfectly age- and event-appropriate, complete with a thin headband. REUTERS PHOTO

Valentino
L.A. TIMES

HAIR

BEST

Reese Witherspoon:
Reese brought out her flirty side with a gigantic, '60s-inspired ponytail.

WORST

Christian Bale's face:
We really, really hope he's growing that thing for a role. Otherwise ...

LACE

BEST

Scarlett Johansson:
We're actually the most smitten with the back of Scarlett's multi-toned, sexy number.

WORST

Florence Welch: We get that this is Florence's style, but perhaps a less drain water-like color would be nice next time.

SPIDERY OUTFIT

BEST

Helena Bonham Carter: Helena will never leave her crazy at home, but this was a great way of showing her personal style without being too kooky.

WORST

Annette Bening:
Annette was trapped in a web of glamour on the way to the show. Someone help her.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY!
Pisces

Feb. 19-March 20

With the sun moving into your sign, your confidence is rising. Maybe you'll finally get out of the house and manage to attend a party or two. If you really want to go to extremes, you might even accept an invitation to an orgy. Just do something, already.

Aries March 21-April 19

You're feeling a build-up of sexual tension. A certain someone is driving you crazy. Some suggested coping mechanisms: joining a gym, venting in therapy, engaging in random acts of lasciviousness. The moon says go with the weirdness.

Taurus April 20-May 20

Part of you wants to make a fresh start with someone, but another part would be thrilled if that person went away. Neptune is telling you to chill out and avoid carrying sharp objects.

Gemini May 21-June 21

There's a frenetic quality to your relationship, thanks to Mars. You're spending every night with someone and wondering how you can keep the passion. Or you're sharing so much phone sex that you're getting burned out.

Cancer June 22-July 22

Your sign is ruled by the moon, and lunar energies are turning you into a lunatic. You've decided to declare your undying love for a married friend with the six kids and the ultra-religious lifestyle.

Leo July 23-Aug. 22

Jupiter continues to bite your butt, prompting you to engage in extreme sexual activity. But how long do you think you can maintain three relationships?

Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22

A sun opposition has you questioning everything. Your hubby neglects you, so why do you stay married? Your girlfriend just uses you as an ATM, so why give her more money? Maybe things aren't as bad as you think.

Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23

You're still wondering what the heck you want to be when you grow up. Meanwhile, sleep, alcohol and TV are your best friends. Jupiter will make things better for you soon. In the meantime, avoid life-changing decisions.

Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 21

A frisky moon is putting you in a daredevil mood. You'll show up at a friend's house wearing just your favorite trench coat. Or you'll leave a lusty note for that co-worker you've been dying to bed. Just make sure to find the correct work cubicle.

Sagittarius Nov. 22-Dec. 21

You know how your friends are always giving you advice about your love life? Have you ever considered how screwed up their love lives are? Venus is reminding you not to listen to clueless advisers. Follow your intuition.

Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19

You're wondering if "normal" is completely wrong for you. Who says you should be limited to just one spouse? The moon is encouraging you to expand your horizons and think outside your usual romantic box.

Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 18

You've been making some big changes, thanks to a frisky sun. You finally got up the nerve to make a date with that hot guy or girl. You managed to kick out that useless roommate who never pays rent. Things are looking up.

GOT A TIP?

Do you have a hot tip on a celebrity sighting in Chicago? E-mail Luis or tweet him @luisarroyave.

Joakim Noah had his Bulls-themed birthday cake at The Underground in the early hours Friday—but he didn't want to eat it too.

The eccentric Bulls star, who turned 26 on Friday, asked the Underground staff not to cut the three-tiered red velvet cake that was presented to him while the DJ played 50 Cent's "In Da Club" (you know, for the "Go shorty, it's your birthday" part). Why? Noah said he liked the cake from Sarah's Pastries & Candies too much and wanted to bring it home.

Teammates Derrick Rose, Luol Deng and Ronnie Brewer joined Noah at his birthday celebration, which took place following Thursday's win over the Miami Heat at the United Center.

Before partying at the Underground, Noah and Brewer had a post-game dinner at Hub 51 and met up with Deng downstairs at Sub 51—the same lower-level club where the Miami Heat's LeBron James and Dwyane Wade partied following their dinner at Hub 51 the night before.

ABOUT THIS WEEK

» "Hey There Delilah" band Plain White T's will host an after-party at Public House following their show at the House of Blues on Monday.

SIGHTINGS

» Ke$ha performed "Tik Tok" during her appearance at Enclave in the early hours Friday.

» Rappers Ludacris and David Banner hit The Underground on Friday.

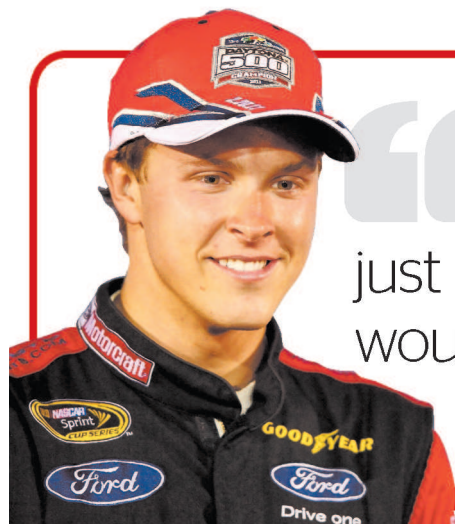

» Rocker Lenny Kravitz checked into The James on Wednesday and had two massages at the hotel during his stay.

» The Miami Heat's LeBron James, Dwyane Wade, Mario Chalmers and James Jones hung out at Y Bar in the early hours Thursday.

» The Bears' Brian Urlacher had dinner at Paris Club on Thursday before hitting Hub 51's Sub 51. The Bulls' Kyle Korver also dined at Paris Club that night.

» Mayor-elect Rahm Emanuel stopped by Pippin's Tavern on Wednesday.

I might have had a valentine. Maybe not one that I want, seeing how she would just be with me because I won, but at least I would have been doing something."

—That's what Daytona 500 winner Trevor Bayne told me Tuesday during an appearance at Harry Caray's Tavern at Navy Pier on how V-Day would have been different if the race had been a week earlier.

twitter truce

Fastest feud and make up ever? Maybe. Rihanna and Ciara tangled via Twitter on Friday night after Ri-Ri heard about an interview Ciara gave to E! network claiming that Rihanna blew her off at a party. It was all over in an hour. We now present the entire feud as tweeted.

$14.2 MILLION

That's how much "Gnomeo & Juliet" earned in theaters this weekend to land atop the box-office charts, according to studio estimates.

Berry bad movies

This weekend's real winners didn't take home naked golden men. "The Last Airbender" and "Sex and the City 2" racked up the prizes at the Razzie Awards on Saturday, thr.

com reports. "Airbender" took home the awards for worst picture, director, screenplay, supporting actor and eye-gouging mis-use of 3-D, while "SATC" won for worst sequel, screen ensemble and actress (presented jointly to all four leading ladies). Also Saturday, Darren Aronofsky's ballet thriller "Black Swan" picked up a much more flattering best feature award at the Film Independent Spirit Awards.

It's hammer time

The mighty Thor is flying into Chicago. Chris Hemsworth, who plays the hammer-wielding god of thunder in Marvel Studios' May 6 film, "Thor," will sign autographs March 19 at the Chicago Comic and Entertainment Expo at McCormick Place. Although details have not been firmed up, Hemsworth is expected to take part in a Q&A session and a separate meet and greet with specially ticketed fans. Visit c2e2.com for full details.

Dawson's got lasers

James Van Der Beek + unicorns + rainbow lasers + muenster cheese. That adds up to one unforgettable and completely weird new music video for Ke$ha's single "Blow." Or as the former "Dawson's Creek" star explained in a tweet: "Ever wonder what would happen if @keshasuxx & I fought a gun battle among Unicorns? Wonder no more."
